Theme of the Seminar

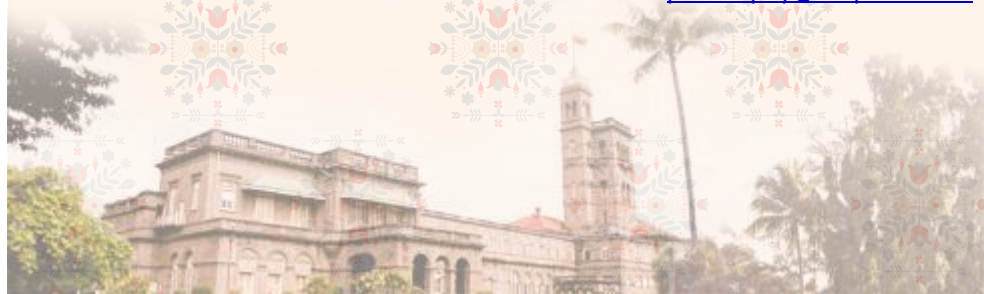

The National Seminar on "Philosophy of Integral Humanism and Its Contemporary Relevance" commemorates the 60th anniversary of Pandit Deendayal Upadhyaya's seminal lectures delivered in 1965, in Ramnarain Ruia College, Mumbai, which laid the foundation of a distinct Indian approach to human development and social philosophy. Integral Humanism, as articulated by Pandit Deendayal Upadhyaya, emphasizes the holistic development of individuals and society by integrating material and spiritual dimensions. It rejects both Western capitalist excess and communist totalitarianism, advocating instead for a decentralized, self-reliant economy rooted in Indian traditions and values. The philosophy recognizes the interconnectedness of body, mind, intellect, and soul, and stresses that true development must balance all these aspects.

Integral Humanism remains vital as India seeks a path of development that is sustainable, inclusive, and deeply rooted in its civilizational ethos. The seminar will serve as a platform to inspire actionable ideas for governance, education, and grassroots reforms, ensuring that India's future growth is both humane and regenerative. It will serve as a platform also to reaffirm and advance Pandit Deendayal Upadhyaya's vision, urging India to lead by example through a philosophy that harmonizes tradition with innovation, and human well-being, at both level individual and social, in coming age.
